Club Operations

AAF Buffalo emphasizes how we operate our club, both from a board and member standpoint, as we believe it is critical to driving successful programming and enhancing membership value. We have taken this approach for multiple years now, and continuously strive to improve for the betterment of our members. This club year, our goal was to use our strong financial state to invest in membership software to aid in membership tracking and further enhance our targeted communications. We also emphasized development of our board members via assigned committees, and actively pursued training opportunities for executive board leadership succession planning.

Long-Range Planning

Goal: Expand leadership opportunities and empower committee chairs to maximize the value and benefits available to members to increase the value of club membership for both professional and student members.

Methods to Achieve Goal: Immediately following the turn of the board term year in June, our president and treasurer met to create a projected budget for the 2019-20 club year (exhibit 1).

The purpose of this meeting was not only to establish operating budgets for our executive board, but to develop and share committee budgets at the board planning session and retreat in July. This is only the second year we’ve done this in our history, building upon its inception the previous summer.

Our treasurer assessed each of the last three years’ expenses to determine which financial trends were stable, were growing, or revealed opportunity by being previously under-funded. This information is crucial to evaluate and share when planning for the upcoming year for a variety of reasons, but a few key ones rise to the top. Primarily, this method empowers committee chairs by knowing from day one the amount of available funds they’ll have to support all their initiatives, both existing and newly created, as well as promotional support for them. Secondly, this planning would allow our executive board to monitor expenses and committee performance more closely as well as the ability to project year-end financials. Committee chairs are now put in a position to proactively plan rather than react to spur-of-the-moment opportunities to enhance membership value. To actively monitor our approach, the treasurer updates committee chairs on their spending semi-annually, and details committee spending monthly as part of our board meetings (exhibit 2).

When preparing for the new year, everything we planned related back to the AAF’s core values: networking and collaboration, education, professional development, government relations, public service, and diversity. We continued initiatives and introduced new ones to strengthen those pillars with special dedication to government relations and diversity, one area that is too often ignored in our industry.

For diversity, we continued our fourth year partnering with Buffalo Prep, a local organization that provides educational programs to local high school students with economically challenged and diverse backgrounds. We held a student engagement day where students toured three local advertising agencies to learn about careers in our field (exhibit 3). A scholarship specifically for one of these students who plans to study advertising or marketing in college will be awarded in Spring 2020 for the fourth year (exhibit 4).

This year we again strengthened our government relations involvement with our annual Advertising Week. We successfully approached the City of Buffalo to receive a declaration from Mayor Byron Brown, designating Advertising Week in Buffalo, a relationship we’ve established for the last five years, as well as earned the support of Erie County for the second straight year to complement our city declaration (exhibit 5).

Results: Committee chairs confidently increased spending to improve existing events as well as create an entirely new event. Our programming committee continued organizing our annual programming that includes the backbone of our club year, our Spotlight Speaker Series, which is a four-part series with an operating budget of up to $10,000. They also created an entirely new event called Laugh Ad Loud, an amateur standup comedy event meant to act as another fundraiser for the club (exhibit 6).

Our education committee also took full advantage of knowing its designated budget in order to amplify an existing student event. Our BrandHack competition, where student teams compete in designing multiple pieces of collateral for a local non-profit to use free of charge, is always well-attended by students, totaling approximately 20 each of its first three years. The competition was previously incentivized by only trophies and minimalistic gift cards to a local coffee shop. This year, the committee reallocated scholarship funds by altering the large amount we were giving to another competition in order to incentive the winning team with a $500 grand prize. This resulted in the competition being maxed out at 25 students and the highest quality work produced in its four years of existence (exhibit 7).

Budgeting and committee leadership efforts have increased member attendance for both professional and student events. Increased promotional spending showed what would be a continuing trend when “The Big Tip-Off,” our yearly kick-off event in August, registered records for both attendance, 205 persons, and money raised for our scholarship fund, $5,320.88 (exhibit 8).

Our Buffalo Prep Student Engagement Day saw 15 students tour three different ad agencies: a large, full-service agency; a smaller creative agency; and a creative production agency. Students participated in an array of industry-related activities, including a branding project, brainstorming and pre- and post-production work.

Goal: Plan out the calendar of events for the 2019-20 club year and announce the schedule at The Big Tip-Off in late-August before the start of the new year.

Methods to Achieve Goal: Looking to generate buzz to go with our membership year launch, our executive board met with our programming committee multiple times throughout the summer months. In its fourth year, our Spotlight Speaker Series was set to continue being the big value draw for our members. We again successfully secured quality speakers early enough during the summer to promote the speaker series as a member benefit. We packaged a speaker series pass at a discounted price, enabling members to purchase tickets for all four events. The series pass was available only to club members for purchase before the first event in October to help drive early membership purchases. Our committee recruited the following speakers: Keni Thacker (diversity and inclusion in advertising), Rob Baiocoo (creative; Brooklyn-based agency owner), Liz Jackson (persons with disabilities in the creative community), Stefan Bucher (creative/branding; LA-based agency owner) (exhibit 9).

Our efforts did not stop with professional events only. The education committee was involved as well, and finalized their programming plans heading into the new year so we could relay our programming schedule in its entirety.

Results: This culminated in our announcement at “The Big Tip-Off,” as we planned. We printed and distributed postcards with the entire programming schedule on them (exhibit 10) and posted membership recruitment posters around the venue (exhibit 11). We reached over 200 attendees with agency bartenders from 10 of the top agencies in Western New York that night in our efforts to kickoff the year. Our first two Spotlight Speakers of the year were a success in the fall, totaling over 60 attendees each, with Rob Baiocco setting a new fall record with over 80 in attendance. In its fourth year, the Series Pass again sold over 20 times, marking the third time we’ve achieved this feat and representing the enthusiasm in our market for these events and the value it carries for our members.

Meeting Members’ Needs

Goal: Increase value for our members by introducing a new membership platform, holding exclusive member-only events, and creating other member discounts and perks.

Methods to Achieve Goals: Our executive board established the need to invest in membership management software during the 2018-19 club year with the goal of implementation in 2019-20. During late-spring and early-summer 2019, our executive board, with efforts led by our VP of Communications, vetted several different vendors specializing in low cost member signup and self-managed services. After multiple demos, we agreed to invest in Join It, an Eventbrite partner that would allow us to integrate with the event management tool we already use (exhibit 12). From a member’s standpoint, our investment allows for a robust profile and easier ticket purchasing.

We have always offered substantial member discounts for all of our events, ensuring the discount gap is wide enough that members feel like their membership is valuable in multiple ways (exhibit 13). We continue to realize successes with our member exclusive Skillshops (exhibit 14). We hold these workshops periodically 2-4 times every year about various topics where members can hone their skills on a topic they already know or are introduced to learnings on another industry topic they may not have exposure to. In late March, we hosted a Skillshop on Building a Music Festival 101 with the host of a newly created local music festival. In May and October, we focused on content with The Value of Influencer Marketing and Content Strategy Development. In January, we hosted a Tips for Direct Mail Campaigns Skillshop with one of our vendor members.

We also continually promote our members and their companies. Each month, members can submit news about their company to be published in our monthly email newsletter along with recently posted job openings. This exposure has made our monthly newsletter more than a news outlet that can be easily overlooked, enhancing it as a true resource (exhibit 15). For our corporate members, we extended opportunities for Instagram Story Takeovers where they could use our profile to showcase their own company (exhibit 16).

Results: We again have nearly 300 members, and all of them have a profile within Join It (exhibit 17). This led to better event registration overall where our board has access to more registrant info, especially large events like the American Advertising Awards. In doing so, we were able to follow-up more closely with a survey for everyone, leading to a record number of responses totaling 96. Two of our Skillshops sold out at 20 attendees each, while the other two nearly did with at least 15 at each. Some attendees signed up to become AAF Buffalo members because they wanted to attend the member-only Skillshop.
Our email newsletters reached 2,105 people with a 23.5% open rate and included submissions from 13 different agencies to share news about their companies.

Leadership Organization & Development

Goal: Identify future club leaders to set a succession plan for 2020-21 and beyond.

Methods to Achieve Goals: To start the year, our executive board members held one-on-one conversations with new board members to understand their goals for being on the board. An incredibly important task as our board replaced 6 of 18 members due to term turnover. These discussions were the first step in identifying what new board members wanted out of their tenure on the board. From there, we used our learnings from the one-on-ones and current board member feedback to assign committee roles for the year. We asked that those who have a strong desire to be on the executive board first take on the role of a committee chair. Each of our two vice presidents oversaw multiple committees and worked closely with the committee chair. We emphasized this type of training this year as we knew both vice presidents’ terms were set to expire June 2020, and we’d need qualified and motivated replacements for such crucial executive board spots. These committee roles were presented at the board retreat in our agenda slide deck (exhibit 18). Chairs were tasked to schedule consistent meeting days and times for each month, planning ahead for the whole year to promote and maintain consistent committee attendance. This practice is similar to what we do for our monthly board meetings. During our monthly executive board meetings, we are then able to check in on the progress of our committees and identify committee chairs interested in serving a larger role in running the club.

Results: This succession plan-focused board planning has paid dividends as this club year enters its final quarter. At March’s board meeting, our president and current executive board were able to announce and then vote as a board on planned successors for both our Vice President of Programming and Vice President of Communications. This is major and important for our organization, as it allows for an onboarding process where the current leaders can train those incoming for an entire three months. Our President and Treasurer are planned to remain the same. This also led to a trickle-down effect on the rest of board leadership committee chair positions. At the same meeting, we announced succession plans for each of our committee chair spots, leading to a unified leadership core going forward. The overall process has led to well-attended monthly meetings, and committee chairs being able to provide a monthly report at board meetings, which set the stage for these transitions.

Goal: Create an environment where board members are active and engaged throughout the year and supported in their ideas and execution.

Methods to Achieve Goals: As a fully volunteer organization, it can be difficult to motivate board members to have a role and do their part to make the club successful. Our executive leadership team made it a goal to build upon the foundation previous year’s successes have laid. As part of our board member kickoff, we held our annual planning retreat meeting where roles were assigned and plans were set for the year. The following week, we held a team building event as our entire board conquered two ropes courses complete with a zipline finale (exhibit 19). We found this exercise to bring our board members closer together and led to more comfortable ice breakers with new members. We’ve also emphasized process playbooks for our programming to put new members in a position to quickly become event organizers while learning from other board member mentors (exhibit 20). Finally, we have an extensive talent pool interested in joining our board. For those that we couldn’t accommodate due to capacity, our executive board maintains communication with them for when spots do open up.

Results: We have seen great results from incorporating our methods to create a better environment for board members. In a year where a third of our board was completely new, the club has continued its successes by planning full yearly schedules, holding cornerstone events, and introducing new member value increasing benefits. We were able to replace two contributors that had to depart from the board mid-term due to unforeseen circumstances, and keep operating at a capacity of 18. Our board remains very engaged and works incredibly hard to top each milestone from previous years, resulting in growing membership and event attendance.

Fiscal Management

Goal: Maintain strong financial health while ensuring value to our members.

Methods to Achieve Goals: Our organization has a goal to break even for every event. Event leads work with their committee chairs to set a budget and ticket prices for each event. This empowers committee chairs to have autonomy after they have already discussed their budget with our treasurer and executive board. Each month, our treasurer then updates the rest of the board on fiscal activity for the month via a treasurer’s report presented at each board meeting. A second area we expanded upon this year were our club sponsorships (exhibit 21). At our kickoff meeting, we established a goal to increase sponsorship dollars for the year by 20% to at least $3,000 (exhibit 22). Our sponsorship committee addressed this in full force by completely revamping our media kit as a whole to aid in areas like show book ad sales (exhibit 23), as well as expanding our sponsorship portfolio to include higher end opportunities than we previously offered at $5,000 and $10,000 levels (exhibit 24). We named each sponsorship after a famous piece of architecture around Buffalo.

Results: Approaching the end of our 2019-20 club year, our financial status is as strong as ever. The club account balance as of mid-March 2020 stands at $89,467.63, which positions us to continue taking value enhancing risks, introducing new events, and growing budgets year over year. We shattered our sponsorship goal, bringing in a record total of $11,500. This included a record number of sponsorships, totaling 10 from 8 different companies: two Electric Tower Sponsors ($2,500), two Rath Building ($1,250), two Darwin Martin House ($500), and four event-specific (various amounts). We also sold another five show book ad upgrades, bringing in an extra $900 of revenue.

The fifth installment of our BrandHack event featured a local non-profit looking for a new postcard, brochure, and social media campaign to generate awareness for their organization. Family Promise of Western New York is an emergency shelter for homeless families. They help families experiencing homelessness stay together during tough times. This event was hosted at Daemen College in Amherst, New York.

Five teams of students from Daemen College, Buffalo State College, Villa Maria and Hilbert College were tasked with creating these final deliverables. Leading the teams were seasoned professionals from the area – Samantha Longoza from Fifteen, Caroline Jette from Delaware North, Andrea LoPuccio from Fifteen, Holly Norris from White Bicycle, and Cody Andreas from the Martin Group. These designers and art directors provided guidance and advice for the teams from brainstorming and development through execution.

The format remained the same from 2019. Teams had five hours to organize and create their ideas before pitching them to our two judges, as well as the representatives from Family Promise of Western New York.

Our professional judge for this year’s event, President and CEO of Luminis Tim Boucheard, offered his expertise throughout the event, and made sure the teams were on track and accomplishing what they had to do in the tight deadline. While representing Family Promise of Western New York, Annayse Pausen provided the students with valuable information as to the various needs of FPWNY, as well as their process for working with various individuals.

Each team beat the clock and produced some well-executed, unique work along the way. Congrats to all the students and captains for producing another great event!

AAF Buffalo sponsorship opportunities | AAF Buffalo Media Kit 2018

In addition to our focus on professional development and networking events, AAF Buffalo also works to give back to the community. Each year we award thousands of dollars in scholarships to area students and donate hundreds of pounds of food to the Food Bank of WNY. The support of our sponsors helps expand our ability to give back to the community.

We take pride in our profession, our region, and our work—and we want everyone to know it. We strive to keep membership valuable and affordable, and we truly hope you’ll partner with us if you are considering a sponsorship with AAF Buffalo. Please fill out the form below to request more information.
