AAF of the Midlands Public Service Campaign 2019-2020

Each year, AAF of the Midlands completes a careful application process to select one local non-profit organization to serve as the public service client. Our approach is to focus on one organization for the entire year, utilizing the talents and professional skills of our board and committee members by promoting the mission of this one organization we believe will have a lasting and positive impact on the community. Our membership is fully engaged with our client and professionals from all aspects of advertising to deliver services and expertise.

Candidate Criteria

Organization must:

1. Be located in or have offices in the Midlands region of South Carolina.
2. Clearly state tangible advertising, media and public relations goals that are attainable through pro bono or in-kind services within a one year period.
3. Show present positive impact on the community and illustrate how increased advertising, media and public relations goals will increase that impact.

Call for Applications and Selection Process

Vital Connections of the Midlands was one of twelve non-profit organizations that responded to a call for applications announced by a press release and by social media channels in May 2019 (Exhibits 1 & 2). After an initial deliberation round with the AAF of the Midlands board, only three organizations were invited to present and answer questions about their organization for the final selection process. Elizabeth Bower, Executive Director for Vital Connections of the Midlands, and her colleague, John Browne, Behavioral Health Manager, passionately spoke about the organization and its mission to provide comprehensive, high-quality early childcare and education for children and families in Columbia, South Carolina. They expounded on the organization’s wish to seek professional assistance in establishing consistency for their brand, giving them the ability to span across multiple platforms, such as their deliverables, like brochures and newsletters; their social media platforms, like Facebook; and any other communications and messaging pieces to the public, like business cards and letterheads. Furthermore, they expressed their desire to register their organization to participate in the annual online giving event, Midlands Gives, held virtually by Central Carolina Community Foundation which supports local non-profits in South Carolina. In order to register to this online giving event, organizations must have a functioning website which demonstrates their mission to the community along with their financial aspirations to encourage potential donors to support their cause.

AAF of the Midlands confidently felt it could provide the means to attain the website creation and branding goals of Vital Connections of the Midlands, and it was selected as the 2019-2020 client (Exhibits 3 & 4).

Background

Vital Connections of the Midlands (VCM) is a non-profit early care and education program whose main focus is providing family-centered services for at-risk families and young children who are struggling with poverty, sometimes substance abuse, and are at-risk for child abuse and neglect. Priority is given to families who are experiencing homelessness. Programs are offered to Midlands communities by three school locations in Columbia, S.C.: Children’s Garden, Tender Years and Arthurtown. The vision of VCM is to break the cycle of generational poverty in at-risk communities by providing comprehensive, high-quality early childhood education, for pregnant moms and children aged six weeks to three years old, that is affordable and has a strong parental engagement component. All of this is achieved while upholding the standards of the National Association for the Education of Young Children, a professional membership organization that works to promote high-quality early learning for all young children, birth through age 8, by connecting early childhood practice, policy and research. VCM is also an agency partner with the United Way, a national organization which fights for the health, education and financial stability of every person in every community.

Marketing Analysis

In July 2019, we had a discovery meeting with Elizabeth Bower, Executive Director of VCM, and John Browne, Behavioral Health Manager. In this meeting, we outlined goals and discussed two important components of a rebranding campaign which would result in better understanding of the organization: a new website and recreating the VCM logo. As an agency partner of the United Way of the Midlands (UW), VCM previously occupied a website landing page on the UW website which discussed key points of the VCM mission; however, it did not detail its full services provided to the community. United Way was amid their own website refresh, so it was imperative VCM take the opportunity to build their own website, not only as a means to reflect its mission and services, but to create a credible resource which would help VCM obtain federal grants plus build a sturdy donor base. Additionally, creating a new website would be critical in their involvement with the widely growing annual online giving event, Midlands Gives, powered by Central Carolina Community Foundation in Columbia, S.C.

For background, Midlands Gives brings regions of South Carolina together as one community, raising funds and awareness for local non-profits in 11 counties. In addition to being a year-round resource for donors, the initiative heightens donations during an 18-hour online giving challenge held annually in the spring. Since its inception six years ago, this online giving event has raised $9.3 million for local non-profits.

While the focus was building a new website, it was found the VCM logo needed to be modernized and usage guidelines be established. VCM officials were using a makeshift approach with their current logo—rough shapes, loss of resolution when placing on numerous documents, in addition to using multiple variations of the logo which caused confusion about locations of the schools and their affiliations (Exhibits 5 & 6). We were informed the members of the VCM board would be involved with ideas surrounding the creation of the new logo, but the final version would be ultimately decided by the executive director.

The last topic discussed in this discovery meeting was the announcement of retirement by Executive Director, Elizabeth Bower, and that John Browne, Behavioral Health Manager would fill the new executive director role after October 2019.

Finally it was concluded that VCM has few resources, which limits them in marketing their programs and services, and are highly dependent upon federal funding, and in-kind donations. Securing funding and in-kind donations helps the organization offset numerous operational expenses that can be better directed to financing its core programs and services. With a multitude of concepts, and eagerness to offer strategic insights, expertise and solutions, we were able to help formulate goals that AAF of the Midlands could assist Vital Connections of the Midlands in achieving.

Goals

1. Create a new logo and brand style guidelines for deliverables and collateral
2. Develop a new website separate from partner agency, United Way
3. Register new VCM website for the online giving campaign, Midlands Gives, powered by Central Carolina Community Foundation held May 5, 2020
4. Expand awareness of organization and the Midlands Gives online giving event through social media

Target Audience

The target audience for this campaign comprises multiple segments: parents, pregnant moms and/or guardians in underserved communities of Columbia, S.C. who are in need of high-quality early childhood education of children ages six weeks to three years of age and who meet the Federal Income guidelines. The second sector of our target includes people living in Columbia, S.C. and the surrounding areas who are willing to donate to a worthy partnership organization or non-profit in general, and a non-profit that provides a safe, educational environment to children in particular.

Strategy

Building a new website was established as top priority in this campaign; however, the VCM logo was in need of a fresh, new look. The logo is the most visual symbol for the organization to convey directly and indirectly about whom they are and what they represent. It is also important to set a style guide to equip organization officials with the tools needed to maintain the new brand image going forward. After the new logo and style guide are created, the art direction is easily laid out for the development of a website. A website itself can be used to accomplish a multitude of marketing strategies to help businesses grow, in addition to giving businesses the opportunity to tell consumers and donors why they should trust said business.
Site location images plus secondary captures of typical childcare and educational materials along with supporting content would help strengthen the authenticity of the organization and its personnel. Lastly, we plan to utilize social media as an effective medium to achieve awareness of the new website, in addition to their entry to the annual online giving campaign, Midlands Gives, powered by Central Carolina Community Foundation, which will be held May 5, 2020. Social media is an effective medium in this regard due to its economical nature, and its ability to spread awareness in a “word of mouth” capacity to reach a large population.

Execution/Tactics

We worked together creating goals and timelines leading up to the launch date of the new website for VCM and its refreshed logo, preceding the annual online giving event, Midlands Gives in May 2020. In August 2019, we invited Elizabeth Bower and John Browne to the annual AAF of the Midlands Kickoff & Art Auction. We set up a table and provided some collateral pieces which were instrumental in introducing their organization to the AAF membership in hopes to widen the reach of their mission to the community (Exhibit 7).

Several meetings were held onsite at the VCM flagship location, Children’s Garden, which is best known of the three locations in the community. Attendance at these meetings varied with VCM officials and personnel, including newly appointed Executive Director, John Browne; Herbie Hollar, Creative Director for Softdocs, a content manager provider; Doug Adam, Account Executive for Indesign Firm, a web design and app development firm.

Conducting these meetings at the VCM locations helped give insight to the culture of VCM. We explored the satellite locations, Tender Years and Arthurtown, and we spoke to teachers, staff and volunteers to gain personal testimonials, along with taking photographs of classroom settings and materials.

Additionally, we enlisted help from the VCM board members by providing a questionnaire which would help explain the overall nature of the organization (Exhibit 8). Site visits to the locations were vital in our ability to “tell their story” and to showcase the organization’s commitment to providing educational and family-centered programs for children which would be demonstrated on their new website.
Meanwhile, with the realization of brand inconsistencies along with haphazard logo usage, designer and creative director, Herbie Hollar with Sofdocs, wielded these cultural findings and applied them to create a new logo which better reflects the VCM mission.

Media/Material Used

Given the lack of financial resources, all labor was provided pro bono. No out of pocket expenses were incurred by Vital Connections for the entire campaign.

- Midlands Biz Digital Subscription - (Exhibit 4)
- Social Media - Facebook - (See referenced documentation.)
- Wordpress for website development - The Indesign Firm

Results Attained

The final logo and style guide was passed before the VCM board of directors with final approval by the executive director. The goal was to bring the logo up-to-date and present VCM as a stable, professional non-profit organization that has the growth of children at its heart. The child silhouettes were kept from the previous logo but updated to a modern look. The typeface is also contemporary but not trendy to maintain longevity. The curves of the letter forms are soft, offering a welcoming look. The color combinations were chosen to avoid gender stereotypes and show growth and sustainability. The butterfly is set in a bright, contrasting color gradient and symbolizes achieving goals (Exhibit 9). Secondary identifiers for each location were created and set in a child-like font, while the descriptive type is set in the same font as the main logo. The descriptive font also reinforces that each location is part of the overall organization. The same child silhouettes were used to make a visual connection to the main logo. Each location has its own primary color pulled from a specific color palette designed for the new brand (Exhibit 10). Lastly, examples of usage were presented on collateral pieces, such as business cards and thank-you notes (Exhibits 11 & 12).

The new VCM website is currently under construction by web developer and account executive, Doug Adam with The Indesign Firm, with the proposed launch date of April 15, 2020. The website will demonstrate all components of the organization, from their mission and educational curriculums, to the introduction of personnel and staff who dedicate themselves to the growth and education of young children.

It is tough to determine whether the online Midlands Gives event slated for May 5, 2020 will occur due to the current Coronavirus, COVID-19 pandemic which has gripped the economy and world at large. Despite the current global crisis, the new campaign and all of the additional resources that were provided through this partnership will support Vital Connections of the Midlands in effectively communicating their mission to the community and beyond. More importantly, it will increase their ability to obtain donations and recruit more volunteers to help offset expenses and fund their core educational and family-centered programs and services.

What is your organization's mission?
To provide comprehensive, high quality early care and education for children and families living in poverty.

What services does your organization offer? Who receives these services?
We provide NAEYC (National Association of Education for Young Children) Accredited care for children of families who are at or below the poverty line. Enrollment priority is given to families experiencing homelessness and to children in foster care. We serve pregnant women and children from 6 weeks of age to 3 years of age in three child development centers located in low income communities in Richland County. We provide year-round care; 7.5 hours each day, 5 days each week. We provide a nutritious breakfast, lunch, and afternoon snack daily for each child. We provide all formula, diapers and wipes for infants and toddlers. We provide vision, hearing, and dental screening for each child and we connect parents with an ongoing source of continuous, accessible health care for their child. Classroom teachers conduct daily assessments of each child in all areas of development. Classroom teachers conduct home visits twice each year for each child in their care. Each of our centers have achieved and maintained an A+ rating with the SC ABC Child Care Quality Center. We provide services and resources to our families that will allow them to be gainfully employed, educated, and contributing members of society. Our 3 focus areas are: 1- health and safety, 2- school readiness, 3- parent engagement.

Does your organization currently have a marketing and/or advertising strategy? If so, please briefly describe it.
We have a recruitment process which involves distribution of enrollment flyers to local businesses: grocery stores, laundromats, hair salons, churches, counseling offices, the foster parent division of SC Department of Social Services, financial aid offices, and family shelters. We also utilize social media during the open enrollment period.

What is the nature of the problem that you believe can be alleviated with the help of this advertising campaign?
We are interested in building a new website for our organization. We also need assistance with the design of new digital logos. Our website needs to clearly communicate what we do and why we do it. We hope to portray the warm and caring environments that we provide for our children and parents. We would like the content for the new website to also be utilized on social media, and with print advertising and direct mailers.

What is the overall goal that this advertising campaign needs to support?
The overall goal is to design a website that will: 1- provide information to our partner agencies and organizations, 2- provide our organization's annual report and pertinent financial data to prospective partners or grantors, 3- educate and update our parents on current events, 4- allow the public to make donations.
